Scars Beneath the Silence: No one is born a criminal

MOHUL BHATTACHARYA

The Oxford Bookstore hosted the book launch event for author Paromita Bhattacharya. The author is a clinical psychologist, and has been a practitioner of psychology specially on the correctional facility inmates. The book Scars Beneath the Silence, published by Exceller Books is a real life story of a scammer and a housewife, and the psyche of both the scammer, and the scammer. Invited for the book launch were guests: Alokamanda Roy, Actor, Classical dancer, and activist, Shahanshah Mitra, BIS author, Heritage artist, Julie Mehta, India-Canadian author, Professor, and Literary Critic, Jonaki Mukherjee, Educator, and the host for the evening was Saheli Mitra, Editor, author, MD Tales Talks Walks.

Alokamanda Roy shared her experience of how she has been trying to bring the inmates back to the mainstream through art, she said, "Initially girls were really excited, but the boys were skeptical about dance. They thought, here comes a crazy woman in her late 50s who wants to make us dance. Probably they thought that the lady is a scammer. But I started martial dance with them. So the kung fu, karate, ideas brought them together. Then we switched to folk dances. From the second or third month we had 55 members in this group. So, I tried to channelise their energies. People call it dance therapy, but dance was only the medium. It was the emotional connection with all of them. I have seen people giving the inmates standing ovations, and cheers after performances. That just shows me there is no evil inherent in people. People need second chances, and this is why books like Scars Beneath the Silence is important. People are too quick to judge, but given the right space, every individual can flourish."

The book has been edited by Saheli Mitra, and moderating the event, Mitra had very deep questions about psyche, and shared, "I generally do not stay up at night, but with this book, I could not sleep. The sheer magnanimity of the horrors, and the human one faces in prison, and I have all the original documents of it, made me restless."

The author of the book Paromita Bhattacharya said, "I wanted to write the stories which start at the bedroom and end in the balcony. The stories are not really new attention to. This is one such story. The female protagonist, and the African scammer are both characters who are from well-to-do families, yet one is trapped and the other keeps draining people in the name of love. There are distinct lacks on the part of the 10 something women who is lured in the name of love and extorted money from. She is educated, she has children and a husband, yet she craves the attention her long distance husband cannot provide."

Shahanshah Mitra on being asked about fraudsters said, "I was posted in a police station place called Tilly in North Bengal region. It is relatively unknown today but it is very important as border security was a struggle even though there. Once we apprehended two men, one from Australia and one from Austria. They had met someone here in Singapore, and were smuggling in some hundred gold bricks into India. So out of curiosity, I asked them how easy it was to make a

Narrating a captivating tale for young aspirants

Dr Dinesh Udaybhan is happy that his recently released book titled Beyond Imagination, published by Exceller Global Press, Kolkata, is making a significant impact, especially among young aspirants aiming for civil services and other high-flying careers. The book, written as a fiction story, follows the inspiring journey of Deepak and Priyanka, two MBA students at IMS Indore, who come from different cities with big dreams and face numerous challenges in their quest for success. It showcases Deepak's struggles and unwavering dedication, despite facing setbacks that serve as a motivational tale for anyone pursuing ambitious goals. Priyanka's success in securing a bank job contrasts with Deepak's initial setbacks, highlighting a realistic portrayal of the ups and downs in the pursuit of dreams. Dr Dinesh shared that the journey of writing this book began during the global pandemic. "What started as an attempt to distract myself from the adverse mental impact of the pandemic evolved into a remarkable literary work," says the author who is an engineering graduate from the SGSITS Indore, an MBA from DAVV and doctorate in management. Dr Dinesh expresses his heartfelt gratitude to the numerous dignitaries who have played a crucial role in the success of his book. Foremost, he acknowledges Anjita Ganguly of Exceller Global Press Kolkata, whose efforts were instrumental in bringing this book to publication. He extends his deep appreciation to Renu Jain, vice-chancellor of DAVV University, and Dr Suresh Silawat, principal of Holkar Science College Indore, for chairing the book's inaugural function. Additionally, Dr Dinesh is grateful to the readers for their overwhelming support. Dr Dinesh also asserted that the hundred percent amount of royalty will be donated to the charitable hospitals for treatment of poor and deprived children. Beyond Imagination is now available at Google play, Amazon and Kobo.
